

Rehab for Fentanyl Addiction In Kentucky

Fentanyl is a synthetic opioid pain relief that is very similar to drugs such as heroin or even morphine. It's known that fentanyl is much more potent and powerful, however. It's normally prescribed for the treatment of chronic pain, for those who have been through cancer treatment or even for those who are recovering from surgery. It can also be given to those who are taking high doses of morphine but are still experiencing some degree of pain. Fentanyl can be abused because of the euphoric effects but it is extremely dangerous, and abuse can quickly turn to an uncontrollable addiction.

Signs and Symptoms of Fentanyl Addiction

If you are abusing fentanyl or if you are concerned that someone you care about is, then there are some signs or symptoms that you can look out for. Some of which can be found below.

- Wanting to stop but not being able to
- Spending time, money and effort in getting and abusing fentanyl
- Urges or cravings
- Not meeting home or school obligations
- Being withdrawn from participation activities
- Withdrawal symptoms

There are also some physical effects of using fentanyl, such as:

- Depression
- Poor balance
- Nausea
- Trouble breathing
- Dizziness
- Weight gain

Why Fentanyl is Dangerous

When you abuse fentanyl, you will soon find that it can be dangerous, and overdoses are common. At the end of the day, the potency of the drug can easily lead to people becoming addicted. When they use the drug, their tolerance can increase, and more of the drug is then required to achieve the desired effect. The more of the drug you use, the more you will need to fight off symptoms and this can be dangerous to say the least. Larger doses can easily damage the respiratory system, to the point where it actually fails. When you combine this drug with morphine or even Subutex, the risk of death then increases. If you feel as though you have a drug problem, then it is vital that you seek help immediately. Every time you take the drug, you increase the chances of developing a long-lasting health condition and you put yourself at a higher risk for fatality as well. This can all be avoided if you take the right steps to your recovery, right now.
