In order to recover from an addiction, no matter how severe it is, you must first decide that it's what you want to do. Rehabilitation can take time and requires a large amount of commitment and dedication. However, it is worth it when you come through the other side and enjoy the benefits of a life free from the difficulties and challenges of an addiction. A treatment and recovery center such as the drug detox center for working union men is an excellent place to start and ideal conditions for recovering Union men.

Our Drug Detox Process

Some treatment centers use a one size fits all approach to recovery that involves detox and counseling, but at the Drug Detox Center For Working Union Men, we take a more holistic approach. We enter into a dialogue with you about your current situation and your recovery goals and needs. We then work with you to design a program that's tailor-made for you. The recovery center will help you to detox, and when you leave, you will be fully supported as an outpatient.

The Program For Men's Drug Detox

The program you choose will be tailored to suit your individual requirements. We have various detox options as well as an individual group and family psychotherapy options. In addition, we have replacement drugs and medications, along with life skills training and outpatient support.
