

24-Hour Treatment Center Near Me for Addiction

Date: 28 July, 2021 By Manny

In 2019, over 70,000 people died of an overdose in the United States. A majority of those individuals overdose on synthetic opioids, like fentanyl. Though Naloxone is available to reverse an opioid overdose, it is not always successful with synthetic opioids like fentanyl because of the strength of the synthetic drug.

In cases like this, where the statistics are so overwhelming and scary for both addicts and their loved ones, the best way to get immediate help is through a 24-hour treatment center near your location.

At the Robert Alexander Center, we offer around the clock care available to those in need. Our state-of-the-art treatment facility offers support for individuals struggling with drug, alcohol, and dual diagnosis disorders. Contact us today to see how our 24-hour treatment center near Mount Washington Kentucky can support you.

What Is a 24-Hour Treatment Center Near Me?

A "24-hour treatment center near me" is addiction treatment close to home. In a 24-hour treatment facility, medical professionals offer around the clock care and support to individuals struggling with addiction. Through this process they work to support and monitor individuals as they go through detoxification and then through either inpatient or outpatient treatment. 24-hour treatment is available to those in need at the Robert Alexander Center.

What Are the Benefits of Going to a 24-Hour Treatment Center?

There are many benefits of going to a 24-hour treatment center. They include dedicated support teams, a variety of individualized treatment options, and a safe environment. Having a dedicated support team that you can become familiar and connect with is one of the most important parts of going to a 24-hour treatment center. Through this process clients can become familiar with and bond with staff. This bond can create an increased sense of safety and offers greater opportunities for sharing and caring treatment.

Another thing about 24-hour treatment centers is that there are more opportunities for treatment. In residential care, clinicians make individualized health and wellness plans for their clients. These address the specific needs of each client and work to support them through their struggles with addiction by addressing their mental, physical, and emotional needs. Finally, 24-hour treatment centers can offer a safe and drug-free environment. For those trying to get clean, returning to the same environment that fostered addiction can lead to relapse or undue stress for the individual. By going to a residential or 24-hour treatment center, clients have the opportunity to grow and develop their self-management and positive coping skills before returning to an environment that may be stressful for them.

Choosing to go to a 24-hour treatment center, like the Robert Alexander Center, may seem like a difficult choice, but it is the best for your future.
